

Let it snow, let it snow, let it snow....and let's close the airport!

One of the UK's busiest airports, in the capital city of Edinburgh, is more or less shut. It was closed yesterday for a time and has been closed today since 4am and only now at about 3pm does the airport website actually give us some welcome news – that it is now partially open.

This was the scene around lunchtime at Edinburgh airport where the list of flights which had been cancelled was very long indeed! And the queue to claim back money for cancelled flights, or information about travelling was endless.
