

Fashion range raising funds for South African children's home in Edinburgh

Fashion designer Dorota Alimowska has created a brand new clothing line which is both affordable and environmentally friendly, and she is going to show it off in Edinburgh next month.

Nayane Fashion is the brain child of a partnership between Dorota and fashionista Ferial Puren and is specifically designed for ladies and girls ages 3 and up, and we are assured that there's a little something for everyone.

✘ The passion behind this 'ECO RANGE' is to raise awareness and much-needed funds for an amazing Children's Home called Footprints in South Africa which is more than just an orphanage: it's a place where children have a home with Mum and Dad.

Both Alimowska and Puren acknowledge that while creating fashion is really fabulous and gets their creative juices flowing, being able to make a difference in even just one person's life is much more valuable and rewarding than creating the greatest masterpiece.

To celebrate the launch of this new range Nayane would like ✘ to invite you to St Johns Church, Princes Street on Friday 17 June at 7:00pm. You will be treated to a spectacular fashion show and entertainment event and on top of that The World Kitchen will also be there to whip up some of their tantalizing African Treats.

Tickets are available at www.nayane.com at £15 per person.

This is a task that cannot be tackled by one organization but by many people working together. This is only the first in a range of similar events that they hope will raise lots of support for Footprints in the future.
