

Five things you need to know today 26 May 2011

☒ Now that the renovations to The Scottish National Portrait Gallery are nearing completion, apparently the National Gallery is next for a scrub up according to The Herald.

The BBC report that there is a new lead in the case of Betty Brown who disappeared from Nicolson Street last year, following the investigation on Crimewatch.

Around £50,000 of steel which has been stolen from an industrial estate in Livingston may be melted down for scrap according to The Scotsman. The metal was to be used for the new seating on the castle esplanade.

We must point you in the direction of Guardian Edinburgh today for the fourth thing on our list. In fact they have loads of things there. What you need to know is that today is the second last day of the blog. Tomorrow we will have our own goodbye to Guardian Edinburgh. Watch out for that!

The Sky Bar is open tonight at The Point Hotel. You can see photos and a review on The List. The bar is on the top floor in the hotel and is only open once a month!
