Edinburgh Unicycling charity event raises £1,500

Jason Auld and his team of unicyclists successfully managed to complete 24 hours unicycling at the National Galleries at The Mound. His team including riders from France raised £1,500 for the charity Unicef. The demo started at 12pm on Friday 30 July and finished 24 hours later at 12pm on 31 July 2011.

There were three teams of four riders who each performed stunts for half an hour at a time on a custom built course. Perfect weather conditions allowed the event to run without delays and tourists donated generously.

Unicyclist Jason Auld said:-" The public response has been great. We managed to raise a substantial amount of money for a charity we really care about. There were moments it got really tough but the public's support kept us going."
