

Five things you need to know today

The boss of Edinburgh Airport, Kevin Brown, has announced his resignation to take up a new position in charge of North Queensland Airport Group, only one year after taking up the job in the first place, according to Business 7.

Paintings which fetch huge prices are nothing new but The Scotsman reports that the Cadell which may sell at auction for £400,000 is a vast sum in comparison to how much the Edinburgh artist left in his will when he died in the 1930s. The auction at Bonhams on 31 August features Scottish items, some of which you can see here.

Paulo Sergio has taken over at the helm of Hearts Football Club. The former Sporting Lisbon boss takes over from Jim Jefferies who departed earlier this week. Meanwhile along at Easter Road, Hibernian today announced the start of a season long 'supporter engagement project' with the launch of a wide ranging survey in conjunction with research agency Scotpulse.

We have reported on polo matches in Edinburgh before but here is a wee video we found on YouTube to show you what happens. Any players out there who would like to be interviewed?