

Five things you need to know today

Edinburgh Architect, Lorn McNeal tells The Scotsman today that he 'smelled a rat' about the statutory notice system when he noticed the amount of scaffolding being put up in the city. We have some practical advice for you as to what you should do about any statutory notices you have received for your property.

Our photograph shows the scene this morning outside the City Chambers where the Save Inverleith Park group were protesting to the council in advance of the Policy and Strategy Committee meeting. We will have a report on the meeting for you shortly.

The Fairmilehead Community Council meets this evening at 7pm Fairmilehead Parish Church on Frogston Road West. One of the items they are going to discuss is the fate of Redford Barracks.

If you get along to The Cameo tonight there will be some local films on offer. From 6.30pm some short films will be showcased. Thanks to @PortobelloHello for the information.

A senior police officer from Lothian and Borders Police has appeared at the Sheriff Court this morning charged with offences under the data protection legislation according to the BBC.