

A sign too far at Holyrood

✘ Parliament bosses have spent thousands of pounds erecting two new entrance signs, just yards from the original granite sign.

The original sign cost £20,000 and informs guests they have reached the Scottish government in both English and Gaelic.

But bosses at Holyrood felt it wasn't obvious enough and installed new boards reading "Way in" accompanied by a large arrow, at a cost of £1000 each.
