

New exhibition at Open Eye Gallery

Two new exhibitions open on 30 January 2012 at Open Eye Gallery, A Retrospective with New Works by Rob Fairley and New Paintings by Kirsty Wither.

The exhibition by Rob Fairley is called An Olympus in the Dream. The Reporter went along to the gallery just before it opened to take a look at the new offerings. It turns out there really is more to art than meets the eye as we found out when speaking with the gallery owner, Tom Wilson:-

As you have heard in the interview, Rob Fairley was the founder of the Room 13 project in Fort William and you can find out more about that here.

Kirsty Wither is a graduate of Gray's School of Art in Aberdeen, and has exhibited in the Open Eye very successfully before.

The gallery is situated in Edinburgh's New Town at the corner of Abercromby Place and Dundas Street in an area awash with galleries of all kinds.
