The Reporter met up with Tom Wilson the owner of the Open Eye Gallery to find out about their new exhibition of oil paintings.

The gallery has been closed for rehangings for a day or two this week before the private view tomorrow and the general opening on Monday 20 February.

This month the gallery is showing works by Barry McGlashan.

“These are new paintings with a figurative mix of narrative & personal experience.

Aberdeen based McGlashan is a graduate & former lecturer of Grays School of Art.

He has exhibited widely, his work being held in many private & public collections in the UK & abroad.”
