

Edinburgh International Film Festival 2012

☒ Chris Fujiwara came to Edinburgh in January to run the 2012 offering of films. He has had his work cut out for him as the reviews of last year's Film Festival were less than favourable and this was reflected in ticket sales. So the programme launch this morning was awaited with slightly eager anticipation.

Here are the numbers:-

There are 121 new feature films from 52 countries and 150 films in all will be shown at the 12 day festival starting on 20 June 2012.

There are 19 World premieres

There are 13 International premieres

There are 11 European premieres

There are 76 UK premieres

There are 29 older films in Retrospectives, including Lawrence of Arabia in all its digitally remastered finery to celebrate the 50th anniversary of its release.

To keep audiences happy the Surprise Movie is back, there will be an Awards Ceremony and Under the Stars 2012 will show films in St Andrew Square. Last year they showed Shrek... what will they have for us this year between 14 – 17 June? We will let you know as soon as we do!

The organisers have also launched Pathways which will feature various strands for different audiences. So for example 15 year-olds upwards will be entertained by films in the Teenage Kicks strand and those comedy lovers among you will be interested in Played for Laughs.

The 47th Edinburgh International Film Festival will open with Killer Joe by William Friedkin and the closing film will be Disney-Pixar's Brave, already lauded by The Scottish Government and others.
