

Five things you need to know today

East Lothian Air Show – Free Writing Workshop – Join in our Live web chat with Lothian and Borders Police on Tuesday 31 July – Coderace – Remember the Farmers Markets!

After all the excitement of the Red Arrows flying over the capital yesterday, they will be back up over East Fortune today with more aerial aerobatics for your delectation and delight today. More information here.

Ryan Van Winkle is running a free writing workshop at the Central Library today. This is to try and help you if you want to enter the competition set up by BBC Scotland and the Scottish Book Trust to tell them where your favourite place in Scotland is.

Live web chat with Chief Inspector Richard Thomas of Pentlands area. This is one of the larger policing areas in the city, covering Gorgie/Dalry, Wester Hailes and all the way to Balerno. There is an exciting new project called Operation Cypher about to start. Do you want to find out more? Then join us at lunchtime on Tuesday 31 July when we will get the answers about what Lothian and Borders Police have in mind. If you have questions you can send them now or on the day.

Have you heard about Coderace? It is a location-based game starting from Edinburgh Napier University's Craiglockhart Campus where teams equipped with bikes and Android mobile devices compete to claim locations across the City of Edinburgh on 4 August 2012 . If you want to get involved then log on to Facebook or to the game's website.

Edinburgh Farmers' Market will show off its wares on Castle Terrace today once again highlighting the most organically grown produce. The EDF has just launched a Greener Scotland initiative which you can read more about on their Facebook page. Stockbridge takes place tomorrow, and if there are any others then feel free to add the details below.