

TERLive – What now for Pedal on Parliament?

Pedal on Parliament in April took the organisers by surprise. There were over 3000 cyclists who took part in what was envisaged as a cycle by some enthusiasts over a short distance in the city to highlight the need for some safety measures for those on two wheels.

The organisers have now met with Keith Brown the Transport Minister, and their cause goes from strength to strength. Today at 10.30 join us for a discussion of all things cycling, including transport policy and what might be done to improve safety on our roads. And give us your comments and fire some questions!

We will also have a cyclist who is out and about and who will Tweet some photos to us from his route. The hashtag is #TERcycling If you are out and about on a bike then join in! Send us photos of your preferred route.

Photo Richard Cross