

Standing on history at the Mary Queen of Scots exhibition

The new exhibition at the National Museum opens today showing exclusive objects about Mary Queen of Scots. The aim is to celebrate her life but also to focus on the pivotal moment when her second husband, Lord Henry Darnley, was murdered on the very place the Museum building now stands.

The Edinburgh Reporter's Trystan Davies spoke to curator George Dalgleish:-