

Concern grows for missing Pitlochry man

Police officers in Pitlochry have renewed their appeal for any information that could help to trace the whereabouts of 81-year-old Pitlochry man William Elder.

Mr Elder has not been seen at his home address in James Place since 10.45am on Tuesday (Dec 10). His disappearance is considered to be out of character and, given his age, there is considerable concern for his welfare.

William is five feet tall, slim, and has brown, greying hair.

When last seen he was wearing a green wax jacket, black loose fitting trousers and brown boots. William has difficulty walking. He has a very distinctive limp and normally uses a walking stick.

Anyone who has seen William or has any information as to where he is now should contact Police Scotland on 101 or speak to any officer.
