

Tonight: Hide and Seek Cinema

✘ An event shrouded in mystique will be held tonight in Edinburgh. The catch? We can't tell you where and we can't tell you exactly what will happen.

Hide and Seek Cinema is an 'interactive cinema event' set up by Events Management students studying at Queen Margaret University. All that is publicly known at the moment is that the event will be held in Edinburgh. If you want to know more, you will need to grab yourself a ticket. All the details are only released to those who purchase a ticket, including the exact location of the event and the dress code.

All proceeds from the event go to The Teapot Trust – a charity set up to fund art therapy sessions for children with chronic illness.

All that Hide and Seek Cinema promises to deliver is a unique cinematic experience to those who are willing to try something a little different. When it's for a good cause, who can deny a little bit of film adventure?

Tickets for Hide and Seek Cinema are on sale via their website. They are priced £15 with all proceeds going to The Teapot Trust
