

Edinburgh is first UK show for popular German artist

Successful German artist in her first UK show

German artist Corinna Wagner, who exhibits at galleries all over Europe, is to have her first UK show at Edinburgh's Urbane Art Gallery from Friday 17 May 2014 to 18 June 2014, with a preview this Friday from 6pm to 8pm.

The new Jeffrey Street gallery is very keen to bring international art to Edinburgh, especially if it is the first time the public here will have had a chance to see the work. Director of Urbane Art Gallery, Tracey Robertson, says that Corinna Wagner's work is hugely popular in Europe, and the gallery is excited about hosting her paintings. She said:

"Corinna's paintings will appeal to everyone, whether it is her haunting images of faces or her abstract landscapes, they draw you back for a further lingering look. Photos don't really do justice to her art which looks so much better in the flesh. We are extremely excited about being the first gallery in the UK to display her work and I anticipate a lot of interest in her paintings, which are usually snapped up very quickly."

Anyone wanting to attend the private preview on Friday, should contact Tracey at Urbane Art on 0131 556 8379 or info@urbaneart.co.uk
