 What Italian? Eugenio Montale famously stated that there is no Italian for poets to rely on – every would-be poet must start all over again. Expanding on this extreme statement and focusing on his own experience as a writer and teacher of literature at Oxford (he is a fellow of Keble College and Professor of Italian and Comparative Literature), Professor Nicola Gardini will talk about the beauties and challenges of Italian as a national and international language for writers today. 6pm, Italian Cultural Institute, 82 Nicolson Street. Free but please book via Institute website.

Writing Dementia: A New Narrative? Despite current media portrayals, there are many people with dementia living well. This guided workshop will allow participants to write about their experiences whether as carers or as people living with dementia. 10am-12 noon, Hanna Cherrie's Teashop, 35 Hamilton Place, £5 including coffee/tea and cake. Call 0131 315 3634 for more information. Part of Luminate: Scotland's Creative Ageing Festival.

This event is open to day care groups, older people, their carers and their families, and is accessible to people of all abilities. The workshop will bring together Indian rhythms with shared stories and music. 11am-12.30pm and 1.30-3pm, Stockbridge House, 2 Cheyne Street. Presented by Dance Ihayami in partnership with Lifecare Ltd. Part of Luminate: Scotland's Creative Ageing Festival.

Abbotsford to Holywood: Sir Walter Scott's film career. Two hundred years on from its first publication Waverley is one of the few Scott novels to remain unfilmed, but other features have succeeded – and failed – spectacularly. Andrew Martin, NLS Curator of Literature and the Arts, will discuss Scott's name above the title, and revisit the celluloid Ivanhoses and Lochinvars of another era. 6pm, National Library of Scotland, George IV Bridge. Free but please book online or by calling 0131 623 3734.
