

WATCH AND WOLF: A new multi-sensory cinema experience!

What could be better than watching your favourite film and enjoying the food and drinks you see on screen? Well Edinburgh's own Jelly and Gin have come up with an event where you can do just that with Watch and Wolf a new multi-sensory cinema experience.

At Watch and Wolf you can fully immerse yourself in a film by eating and drinking along with the characters. On arrival guests will receive a box which holds numbered packages of bite-sized food and cocktails. After a short introduction, the film begins, during which the food-matched moments are signalled by the special host.

Watch and Wolf launches in December 2014 at the National Gallery of Scotland in the Hawthornden Lecture Theatre. The first three screenings will have a decidedly Christmassy feel, and will include the retro classic Gremlins and perennially popular Elf and The Wizard of Oz. We are going to see Elf for a great fun start to the festive season and having been to a number of fantastic evenings organised by Jelly and Gin I am sure this event will be fabulous!

7.30pm on Thursday 4 December: Elf

7.30pm on Thursday 11 December: Gremlins

7.30pm on Thursday 18 December: The Wizard of Oz

Tickets cost £28 and are available now at www.jellyandgin.eventbrite.co.uk

Other Info

Screenings start at 8pm sharp, guests must arrive at 7.30pm to collect their food and drink, no admittance after 7.55pm. This is a strictly over 18s event.

Non-alcoholic and vegetarian options can be provided on request by emailing contact@jellyandgin.com Due to the nature of this event other food allergies cannot be accommodated.

Please note, the food provided is not a full meal, rather a series of small bites. No refunds on tickets.

