

Tour the hidden art at Moray House

The Moray School of Education at the University of Edinburgh is home to exciting works by leading contemporary Scottish artists, whose works are featured in the Tate, National Galleries, and other major institutions.

A tour on Thursday February 19th will introduce the public to the works hidden away in one of Scotland's oldest university buildings. Paintings by Alan Davie, Robin Philipson, Anne Redpath, and countless others are being brought into the spotlight for the very first time.

Bring your packed lunch to this interactive tour led by renowned professor of contemporary Scottish art, Andrew Patrizio, and learn directly from the curators about the ongoing research to redisplay these works in an upcoming exhibition. The one-hour tour starts from the Main School Reception at the Old Moray House at 1:00pm.
