

Edinburgh Festival Fringe 2015 – Wil Greenway: For the Ground that Grew Me

 Wil Greenway: For the Ground that Grew Me

“I’m going to tell you how my Grandad lost his eye. I’m going to tell you the secret to making the best roast potatoes in the world. And I’m going to tell you how a costume party can ruin your life. Family history 100 years old. Our roots have stories. These are mine.”

[tweet_box design="default"]Award-winning storyteller Wil Greenway weaves a brand new tale of hilarity, heartbreak and home truths.[/tweet_box]

Wil is exactly six feet tall, just like the tower of dirt they’ll bury you beneath when you’re gone. Fresh from taking his previous creations “A Night to Dismember” and “Vincent Goes Splat” through London, Brighton, Melbourne, Auckland and Oslo, Wil arrives with a brand-new show, premiering at the Edinburgh Fringe 2015.

Venue:	Underbelly: Med Quad (Directions)
Date:	06 – 30 August 2015 (previews 6th & 7th, no performance on 17th)
Time:	04.20pm (1 hr)
Tickets:	£6 – £10
Link:	Tickets