

Five things you need to know today Edinburgh

Deliveroo

Fully Fashioned: The Pringle of Scotland Story

Evening Walking group

Fanfare

EdinburghReportage

Have you tried Deliveroo yet? The city centre is buzzing with the little scooters and motorbikes carrying restaurant food to hungry folk in Edinburgh. We tried it over the weekend and the service was both quick and friendly.

This new service aims to change eating patterns in the capital with an offering that allows customers to have quality restaurant food delivered direct to their homes or offices.

Working with local independent restaurants and premium chains, hungry residents of Edinburgh and Glasgow can finally order their favourite dishes such as gourmet burgers from GBK, delicious ice-cream from iconic parlour S.Luca, quality burritos from The Squid and Whale and many more. Delivering food to customers via a fleet of delivery mopeds and cars, customers simply need to select dishes, pay online at deliveroo.co.uk and have their order delivered fresh within an average time of 32 minutes from noon until 11pm.

26 local restaurants in Edinburgh are working with Deliveroo at present across their two Edinburgh North and Edinburgh South zones including:

- Laila's Bistro – a popular Mediterranean bistro in the Old Town
- Hakataya – a Japanese restaurant in the heart of the New Town
- S.Luca – an iconic icecream parlour that dates back to 1908

Caroline Hazlehurst, Regional Manager for Scotland & North East England said: "We're really excited about bringing Deliveroo to Edinburgh and Glasgow. The food scene in Scotland is enviable and the restaurant scene thriving, yet up until now food delivery services haven't catered for those who want to enjoy premium restaurant food at home or at their desk. We're working with a superb and eclectic selection of Scottish restaurants so it's time to treat food-lovers in Scotland to the flexibility and level of service that Deliveroo is known for."

If you try it then do let us know what your experience is like!

***

This exhibition of knitwear runs until 16 August 2015 in the Exhibition Gallery 2, Level 3 at the National Museum of Scotland Chambers Street.

Celebrate the 200th anniversary of Pringle of Scotland. This exhibition explores the central role the company has played in the production and design of knitwear, not only in Scotland but around the world. Using rare pieces of early knitwear, iconic fashion garments, archival records and film footage, the exhibition traces Pringle's evolution from hosiery manufacturer to cutting-edge fashion brand.

***

Loading...

Taking too long?

Reload document

| Open in new tab

[Download \[162.00 B\]](#)

***

The Edinburgh International Festival has launched Fanfare, a free community event that will tap into one of the most enduring symbols of Scotland – the beloved brass band. The Edinburgh International Festival has called on the Scottish Brass Band Association to harness the enormous forces of Scotland’s brass bands by presenting a day of free outdoor performances along the city’s idyllic Water of Leith Walkway on Sunday 23 August.

Read more here

***

EdinburghReportage is our user generated content website where we invite you to make your own contributions. This week we would love to see your photos of our important pieces of public art in Edinburgh.

There are loads from Paolozzi to all those statues whether on George Street, Princes Street and Constitution Street. We would like to collect them all together and hear what you think of our art works. Do they make a difference to you?

Click here to add yours!

Sign up here for a daily email from The Edinburgh Reporter !

[mc4wp_form]

If you are reading this article on paper and would like to visit the website then scan the QR code above with a smartphone or tablet and you will be taken straight there.