

Edinburgh Councillor Blogs – Maureen Child

☒ Thanks to people concerned about the pigeons seemingly trapped behind the wire netting that was (at last!) recently placed to the underside of Brighton Place/Southfield Place bridge. Before pigeon-proofing, 150-200 pigeons were moved out. The Council officer overseeing the project confirms that outlets have been formed in the new netting to allow any pigeons to escape. (I have photos!) It can take 2 or 3 weeks for some pigeons to get the message and move on. This Council officer will continue to monitor it, and if the numbers of pigeons don't drop he'll bring in pest control and a section of netting may have to be removed – temporarily – to release them.

I will be at Portobello High School for a while on Saturday to watch some top class basketball played by local people. Entry is free to all. More here: Porty High Basketball Day

After a treacherous journey, and feeling was and famine at home, men women and children are arriving in Europe scared and exhausted. Moved by their plight, Porty resident and musician Rosie Nimmo has written a song in response to the refugee crisis, with proceeds going to help those in need. If you like it, please do share it with friends: Refugee \(Clouds Colliding\) by Rosie Nimmo It is also on Rosie's third album, Scrapbook, which will be out in October.

On the same theme, Portobello Community Council's CalAid collection took place in Portobello Town Hall next week, with over 30 volunteers gathering and sorting donations for distribution to refugees based in the French town of Calais, then making short work of packing the bundles of donations into vans the following morning. It took us just 15-20 mins to fill the two vans. Well done to Emma Dempsey who spearheaded the whole affair! More about Calaid here: <http://www.calaid.co.uk/> Some of the generous gifts were not what Calaid said was needed, and could not be sent on, so I took them to the Basics Bank for Portobello based at the Wilson Memorial Church at Kekewich Avenue to help people in crisis in our own community. More about what the Basics Banks do here: <http://edinburghcitymission.org.uk/ministries/basics-bank/>

Apart from letting the Portobello Calaid group have the use of Portobello Town Hall on the Saturday-Sunday morning, the Council are playing their full part in the national response to the refugee crisis.

The Edinburgh Trust is part of the wider national charity Turn2us and helps people in financial hardship within Edinburgh by giving small, one-off grants to help people pay for things they vitally need. A grant may cover the cost of living, or buy practical items such as essential white goods, furniture, carpet and flooring. They also help with very basic items such as clothing, fuel costs and removal costs. The Trust can also help people by sign-posting them to other charities or sources of support, and by doing a basic welfare benefits check. More here: The Edinburgh Trust

Gardeners and allotment holders at Telferton, between Craigentenny and Portobello, have won the right to legally cultivate their plots. Last week the allotment holders were granted a Certificate of Lawfulness by Edinburgh City Council, giving them a legitimate right, under planning law, to use the site they have occupied for more than 90 years. A planning application will be submitted soon to develop most of the site. There is a local campaign to stop that happening, as you will know from the front page of this season's Portobello Reporter.
