

The Bluetones coming to the Liquid Rooms in April

After the sell-out success of 'The Bluetones return to the live forum' in 2015 the band have announced an extension to the tour in 2016. This time taking in 18 dates – the tour starts on 14th April in Milton Keynes and culminates at London's Roundhouse on 5th May.

Included in the tour is the Liquid Rooms in Edinburgh where the band will play on Monday 25th April.

The Bluetones, which were a huge part of the Brit Pop era, were always an engaging and dynamic live outfit. Fronted by the enigmatic Mark Morriss, they had an impressive run of hit singles that included 'Bluetonic', 'Slight Return', 'Marblehead Johnson', 'Solomon Bites The Worm', 'If' and 'Keep the Fires Burning'. Their live shows brought the West London four-piece an army of devoted followers worldwide.

The Bluetones will plunder their incredible body of work one more time, playing their most popular songs. If you miss them this time, it may be a lifetime before you get another chance.

Lead singer Mark Morriss said: "We were overwhelmed with the response to our 20th anniversary comeback tour this September which we also thoroughly enjoyed doing. So knowing there was more demand to see us we decided we'd extend what was originally supposed to be a brief reunion into April and May next year. "

Show starts 19.00 Tickets £21.00
