

Rugby – Edinburgh v Glasgow

1872 SCOTTISH CUP

UPDATE ON FIXTURE VENUE FOR THE DECIDING LEG

Saturday evening's GUINNESS PR012 fixture between Glasgow Warriors and Edinburgh Rugby has been moved to BT Murrayfield after the Scotstoun pitch was deemed unplayable following the recent storm which hit the country.

All efforts have been made to get the game played at Scotstoun, however following heavy rain and wind in Glasgow over the last 48 hours it is no longer possible to play the second leg of the 1872 Scottish Cup at Scotstoun, especially with more bad weather forecast for the weekend.

The game will be played at BT Murrayfield and will kick off at the same time (5.15pm) and will be broadcast live on Sky Sports.

All tickets for the fixture at Scotstoun will be valid for the game at BT Murrayfield and any further ticketing information will be provided in due course. Please be aware that this fixture is still a Glasgow Warriors home game and all Edinburgh Rugby season tickets and car parking passes will not be valid for this match.

Any Edinburgh Rugby supporters that have purchased bus tickets to travel through to Scotstoun on Saturday afternoon will be fully refunded now that circumstances have changed, and we will endeavour to update you as soon as we can when further details have been announced with regard to ticketing for the match. We will also contact you in due course to arrange your travel refunds.
