

The Charlatans to play Edinburgh this December

The Charlatans will play one last home tour promoting their most recent album Modern Nature with two Scottish shows this month.

The British band, who have had three number one albums in the UK, will play Edinburgh's Usher Hall on 14 December.

Modern Nature was received exceptionally well among fans, who proclaimed it was one of the best efforts in their illustrious 26-year career. Singles such as 'So Oh', 'Come Home Baby' and 'Let the Good Times' were placed on the A-list on BBC 6 Music.

The band performed a secret set at Glastonbury this year, and played slots at Isle of Wight, V Festival and Tramlines.

This will be the The Charlatans last UK tour before the band head off to tour Europe, America and Australia.

On their return they will be heading back into the studio to start work on their follow-up album.
