

Five things you need to know today

- MoJoCon 2016
- At the Palace of Holyroodhouse
- Hustings
- Coffee – delivered!
- Gardening Scotland

Anyone who has ever been interviewed by The Edinburgh Reporter will know that she is a mobile journalist. Yes, that means that everyone from the Deputy First Minister speaking about reform of Air Passenger Duty to a political party leader launching his campaign... (Patrick Harvie shown below!) are all interviewed using a mobile phone. We have a series of interviews here with as many Edinburgh candidates in the 2016 Scottish Parliamentary Election as we have managed to speak to.

Today is the start of the world's largest mobile journalism conference in Dublin and Phyllis will be speaking at RTÉ Mojocon towards the end of the day to explain how mobile journalism means that The Edinburgh Reporter can and does cover news quickly and cheaply without the need for expensive gear.

If however, you like what you read and watch here then you might think of making a small donation from time to time....? It would help us keep going in coffee...and cakes...

Gardening Scotland takes place at the Royal Highland Showground from 3-5 June. The show promises everything from plants to garden furniture and everything for the perfect BBQ.

The Big Back Garden area will have a host of fun ideas for entertaining children and families of all ages entertained.

Children will also love to look at the miniature pallet gardens, bouncy castles, birds of prey, bees, play equipment, and take part in face painting and treasure hunts and you may go home having inspired your family to have a go at 'grow your own'.

Gardening Scotland caters for parents and grandparents too. With Champagne and Pimms bars, a Fashion Show, dedicated Tea Room and exhibits celebrating local produce, speciality beers, music, healthy eating and so much more, there really is something for everyone.

For more information, visit www.gardeningscotland.com Advance tickets and packages start from just £14 and are available from the website or by calling 0131 333 0965. Children under 16 go FREE.
