

Now get your pizza delivered by Deliveroo!

Deliveroo has struck a new partnership with PizzaExpress which will allow you to have your pizza from any PizzaExpress in Edinburgh delivered straight to your office or home.

All PizzaExpress outlets across the city will be part of the new arrangement, and we are told that the pizzas will cost you the same as they do in the restaurant.

In the first month there will be no delivery charge.

Each order will be made fresh and will then be brought to you by Deliveroo riders within 32 minutes from the time it leaves the kitchen.

Richard Hodgson, CEO, PizzaExpress commented: "It's been our long standing ambition to deliver our much loved pizza to customers at home; however the challenge has been to find a way to deliver our products nationwide, to restaurant standard.

"Deliveroo is a perfect fit for us, as they are dedicated to providing excellent delivery logistics to the restaurant industry. They can deliver our hand-made pizzas and other dishes quickly and to an excellent standard; ensuring that our customers experience the same dining experience at home as they would in our restaurants."

Will Shu, Deliveroo co-founder and CEO, said: "PizzaExpress is one of the biggest and best loved restaurant brands in the UK and one of our customers' favourites. We're thrilled to be working with them and bringing their delicious food to hungry customers across Edinburgh."

This is the biggest restaurant partnership which Deliveroo has entered into, and the service will be available across the UK by the end of July.

Deliveroo will send your food order between 12 noon and 11pm. You can order using their App.
