

Police appeal to trace missing Niddrie woman Christine Thomson

Police are appealing for information to help trace a 62-year-old woman reported missing.

Christine Thomson, who lives in Niddrie, was last seen by family in the Dunbar area around 7.15pm on Wednesday (June 29).

Christine has not been in touch with her friends or family since and concern is now growing for her welfare.

Officers are currently looking into reports she may have been within the Nicolson Street area of Edinburgh at around 2pm on Thursday (June 30th).

Anyone who believes they may have seen her, or knows her current whereabouts is asked to come forward.

Christine is described as white, of medium build, 5ft 6inches tall, with grey/white hair in a short bob, brown eyes and glasses. She was last seen wearing a pink shirt, black $\frac{3}{4}$ length raincoat, black trousers, black patent shoes with a bronze buckle and carrying a black handbag.

Inspector Norman Towler of Craigmillar said: "We're conducting a number of enquiries in Edinburgh and East Lothian in an effort to trace Christine

"We'd appeal for the public's assistance and ask anyone who believes they may have seen Christine since Wednesday evening to get in touch.

“If Christine hears this appeal I would urge her to contact us or her family, who are very worried about her, and let us know that she is safe and well.”

Anyone with information is asked to contact Police Scotland on 101”
