

Edinburgh Festival Fringe 2017 – Aaaand Now For Something Completely Improvised

Racing Minds present: Aaaand Now For Something Completely Improvised

They've decided to make it up.

With modesty ablaze, these less than bashful street-cred kids make it up in make up. Let them boast to the most – they might be la crème de la crème or end up with egg on face toast with audiences crying an ouef is an ouef!

Now established as one of the leading comedy improv groups at the Fringe, Racing Minds return to the Pleasance with their critically acclaimed long-form improv show Aaaand Now For Something Completely Improvised – bigger and better than ever!

The audience immediately take control as the show opens and they decide the name of the main character, their hidden secret, the starting location and the title of the story, and the rest is completely – as promised – improvised.

With no script or plot (and usually the daftest of scenarios thanks to Fringe audiences' imaginations!) each show will be totally unguided, entirely unpredictable and undoubtedly one of the finest and most unique hours you will catch at the Fringe. And better still, it's family-friendly and suitable for all ages!

Formed in 2010 by members of The Oxford Imps, Daniel Nils Roberts, Tom Skelton, Chris Turner, Douglas Walker and Dylan Townley immediately won their fan-base at the Free Fringe in 2011 and packed out their venue every single day. A return in 2012 promised the same, and the Pleasance soon snapped them up the next year where they went on to enjoy sell-out runs in 2013, 2014, 2015 and 2016, following that up with three award-nominated sell-out tours to Perth Fringe World in 2015, 2016 and 2017. They have been heard live on BBC 6 Music, recorded an exclusive series for Audible, and their completely improvised 50s-style comic radio play podcast The Wireless Podcast is a cult smash, with over half a million followers on SoundCloud.

Tickets here.

Pleasance Queen Dome, Venue 23 @12pm, 2-28 August 2017

www.racingminds.co.uk | TWITTER: @Racing_Minds |

FACEBOOK : www.facebook.com/RacingMindsImprov