

Edinburgh Festival Fringe 2017 – Olaf Falafel presents The Marmosets Of My Mind

Critically acclaimed idiot, Olaf Falafel is back with another hour of surreal stupidity.

Who knows what it'll involve, probably conkers, maybe sandpaper. Whatever it is, he personally guarantees your money back if you actually learn something of any use.

The Marmosets Of My Mind is the follow up to Falafel's award nominated debut hour, Olaf Falafel and the Cheese of Truth, and explores the stranger recesses of Olaf's head via a blend of stand up, audience interaction, projected video stuff and domestic cleaning products.

As well as finding comedic success onstage (Leicester Square New Comedian 2015 finalist, Laughing Horse New Act of the Year 2014 runner up, Fosters Golden Jester 2013 winner), Falafel has also enjoyed online and TV fame on Daniel Tosh's Comedy Central show Tosh.0 with his short viral videos.

Olaf's absurdist movies include a croissant-coiffured talking Donald Trump puppet (retweeted over 19,000 times, with 23 million views in total at the time of writing), slices of truth telling cheese being thrown onto newspapers and the Bee Gees hiding in beards.

Olaf enjoys an average of over 500 retweets a day for his comedic output and had over 75 million views on the former social media platform Vine.

Falafel has also recently hit the headlines by securing publishing's fastest ever picture book deal for his semi-autobiographical masterpiece Old MacDonald Heard A Fart.

Title: Olaf Falafel presents The Marmosets Of My Mind

Venue: The City Café, 19 Blair Street, EH1 1QR

Venue number: 85

Venue

website:

<http://www.laughinghorsecomedy.co.uk/edinburgh/venue.asp?>

VenueID – 123

Tel: 0131 220 0125

Dates: August 3 – 27 August (not 15)

Age: 16+

Duration: 1 Hour

Entry: Free (Donations)

Web: www.olaffalafel.com

Twitter: <https://twitter.com/OFalafel>