

Edinburgh Fringe Festival 2017 – Gary Tro: SupercalifragilisticexpigARYT R0cious

GARY TRO: SUPERCALIFRAGILISTICEXPIGARYTROCIUS | EDINBURGH
FRINGE 2017

Stand-up Gary Tro explores how to find happiness when you're incapable of seeing anything through to completion.

“This is a show for everyone who feels a lack of fulfilment.
This is a show for anyone who struggles with perseverance.
This is a show about commitment...maybe”

As seen on BBC iPlayer and as heard on BBC Radio 4, stand-up Gary Tro brings his hilarious, joyously angry, debut show, back to the Edinburgh Fringe Festival for the second consecutive year.

Discussing the show's Edinburgh return, Gary said: “For centuries, philosophers have been teasing our intellects with questions such as, ‘If Tro does a show in Edinburgh and there's no one there to see it, did it even happen at all?’ I had a great run last year, after 24 performances I left with a really slick show of which I was immensely proud. And yet, I'd worked so hard on developing a great show, I had completely neglected the fact you have to promote it too (Who knew? Did I mention I had trouble seeing things through to completion?). So, this year I'm determined to do SupercalifragilisticexpigARYTROcious justice, by bringing it back with a better located venue, more marketing...and hopefully this time, an audience.”

If you'd like to help make Gary's Edinburgh dreams come true this year by coming along to a show, he'd clearly be delighted. Here are the full details:
