

Missing Barnsley man may be in Edinburgh

Steven Jackson has been missing from Barnsley for over a week and police officers from South Yorkshire Police are growing increasingly concerned for his welfare. Have you seen him?

Steven, 50, had last been seen in the Wombwell area of Barnsley at around 9am on Sunday, 16 July, however CCTV footage shows him 48-hours later in Scotland, on Tuesday, 18 July at 9.35am, leaving Haymarket station in Edinburgh.

This is the last sighting of Steven and police believe while he still may be in Scotland, he could be attempting to make his way back to Barnsley as he has connections in the Silkstone, Penistone and Ingbirchworth areas.

Officers are concerned for his health and wellbeing, and would ask anyone who believes they may have seen Steven to please call police.

He was last seen in Barnsley wearing cream tracksuit bottoms and a blue t-shirt, however is seen in the CCTV image wearing blue bottoms. He does use silver crutches as seen in the CCTV image and is known to carry a rucksack with him.
