

Edinburgh Festival Fringe 2017 – Seven Crazy Bitches

Take Shakespeare's 'Seven Ages of Man', put it in a variety of cheap wigs, teach it the juke box of a regional gay bar, roll it in a whole lot of glitter, and- with the help of a friend -you have Holly Morgan's righteous and outrageous show, Seven Crazy Bitches.

Resigned to his designated box, Shakespeare himself (or rather, Tom Moores) must watch while Morgan, with sass and charm, playfully interacts with the audience and casually rips apart and puts back together his meanings and words with the world's leading divas.

Join this Edinburgh Festival Fringe first-timer, The Diva on a Budget, as she 'guides' you through the Seven Ages of Woman using only the best cardboard props and finest questionable impressions. Pit stops include seduction techniques via Kate Bush, an interview with the woman who lived in Prince's head and finding out just how many 2p pieces a man can insert up his foreskin. This is Stand Up Comedy Cabaret (Standaret? Cabedy?) as you've never seen it before, because The Diva's pretty sure that she just invented it...

Directed by Esh Alladi and just returned from sell-out run at the VAULT Festival, underneath Waterloo Station in London, this (literal) underground success is ready to storm new cities with her off-brand and off-colour sense of humour in this feminist fancy-dress quest to finally hit the wig time.

Venue: Assembly Hall, Baillie Room, Mound Place, EH1 2LU

Time: 19:00 Running Time: 60mins

Dates: 03 – 27 August. Previews 3-4 August. No show Mon 14
August, Tues 24

August

Buy tickets here