

Edinburgh Trams will run till midnight

Edinburgh Trams will keep running between Edinburgh Airport and the City Centre for the rest of today until midnight.

Following a review of the current weather situation and available resource, services the company will continue to operate approximately every 20 minutes.

Work will then carry on through the night to clear snow with the intention of resuming passenger service from 5am tomorrow with an anticipated frequency of approximately every 20 minutes.

A reciprocal ticket agreement with Lothian on their Airlink 100 service will continue until further notice.

Lea Harrison, Managing Director of Edinburgh Trams said: "We'd like to thank our customers for their patience and wish to ensure you that we are doing all we can to help keep you moving while keeping safety in the forefront of our minds."

Customers are being urged to refer to www.edinburghtrams.com or the Twitter account for the most up to date information.