

Edinburgh Festival Fringe 2018 – Hamlet

The multi-sellout Fringe phenomenon is back again with their biggest and most outrageous show to date, taking to the McEwan Hall stage for the first time.

This year Magnificent Bastard Productions tackle the Bard's longest play and the most popular during his lifetime, to present their own raucous, rowdy and riotous rendition of Hamlet.

Having already sold over 250,000 tickets worldwide, the award-winning group is back once more to help you 'enjoy Shakespeare responsibly'.

So how does it work? Each show one cast member is chosen to get mightily merry. The rest is a balancing act between the (trimmed down to an hour) Shakespeare script and the sober team of improvisers frantically struggling to keep the story on the rails.

Every single show is a one-off. Every single performance has a different drunk actor/sober cast combination. Every single time they are genuinely inebriated.

McEwan Hall, Bistro Square (venue 302), 4 – 27 August 2018,
22.50