

Colony of Artists 2018 – open today between 12 noon and 6pm

Nick Gardner who will be reading tarot cards today

Colony of Artists takes place today. To find out more visit www.colony-of-artists.com

These two-storey dwellings are a unique architectural feature in Edinburgh. They were originally built in the 19th century to provide quality homes for the city's artisan workers.

The exhibition was the idea of resident artist Gill Smith, inspired by the Pittenweem Arts Festival where artists also open up their homes to the public. The first Abbeyhill exhibition, in 2005, featured nine artists.

“The number of exhibiting artists has grown every year,” says Katherine Chisholm who, with her husband and fellow artist William Mazur, has organised 11 of the subsequent exhibitions.

© Martin McAdam

Clare McCrory and her art

© Martin McAdam

William Mazur with an example of his art on display at Colony of Artists

© Martin McAdam

Christine Klien and the work she produces.