

Cute video of binturong cubs at the zoo

Edinburgh Zoo have a couple of rare binturong cubs and they recently took their first outside steps.

Here they are in all their cuteness.

These animals are a member of the civet family and usually live in South East Asia. They smell a bit like popcorn apparently which comes from a chemical compound in their urine.

They are sometimes known as bearcats and are vulnerable in the wild. Their population has dropped by about a third in the last two decades.
