

Dog walking – new mitts for wet dogs

The new mitt in operation on a wet dog

A constant problem, particularly in the winter months, how to dry your dog after being out in the rain.

Well, luxury pet bedding manufacturers Scruffs® have announced two product additions.

They are Noodle drying mitts and towels which, they claim, are extremely absorbent.

They apparently soak up excess moisture, enabling your dog's coat to dry quickly after a wet and muddy walk.

Micro-fibre chenille is used to produce the noodles and the micro-fibre material is made from millions of textured, ultrafine strands woven together.

The new mitts and towels have been in development for the last six months and the company are confident both products will add value.

They come in three different colours, beige/stone, navy and red and are launched this month.

I don't want heavy rain but when it comes I'm ready to test these products on Harvey.
