

Dog towel and mitt have proved a winner

The mitt in action, but not on Harvey

We've been trialling a Noodle drying mitt and towel on our son's dog, Harvey, for a month.

They arrived from Manchester-based luxury pet bedding manufacturers Scruffs as I wrote then, and are the latest addition to their range.

So, do they work? Well they do and, what's more, Harvey, a Cavalier King Charles spaniel, who hates being towel-dried, loves the mitt which doubles as a grooming tool.

The towel and mitts are extremely absorbent and soak up excess moisture.

Why? Because the micro-fibre material is made from textured, ultrafine strands woven together. Drying time is greatly reduced.

The Noodle drying towel is £13.99 and the Noodle drying mitt is £12.99 and they come in three different colours beige/stone, navy and red.

They work for us, and Harvey.
