

The Proclaimers are on their way to Edinburgh Castle in July

The Proclaimers announce today their summer 2019 homecoming concert at Edinburgh Castle – and tickets go on sale this Friday 23 November at 9.00am.

As part of their sell-out tour this will no doubt be another hot ticket in the capital. The concert will take place on 20 July 2019.

As well as Edinburgh there are other dates in Melrose, Inverness and Glasgow at the Hydro.

Craig and Charlie Reid said: “We are looking forward immensely to coming home during the summer for four major Scottish shows. The atmosphere in Scotland is unique and the whole band looks forward to the concerts.”

“It’s our first major show in the Borders for several years, great to be returning to Bught Park and the Highlands audience, our first show back in the Castle for many years and also going back to the Hydro and closing our Angry Cyclist World tour with the final show in Glasgow.”

The album 'Angry Cyclist' was released to immense acclaim in August (Cooking Vinyl) debuting in the UK Official Album charts at 17 and at number 3 in the UK Official Independent Album Charts. The Proclaimers 8th Top 40 UK album. The Proclaimers then headed back out live from July this year with 48 sell out dates across the UK and a 13-date tour of Canada from Victoria to Montreal.

Mark Mackie, director of Regular Music said: "It's great news that The Proclaimers are coming out next summer, covering the country from North to South and East to West with these four very special shows for Scotland.
