

Police hunt man and woman who racially abused Asian couple on train

Officers from British Transport Police are looking to identify a man and woman after passengers were racially abused on board a train travelling between Edinburgh and Lancaster.

At approximately 6.30pm on 11 November, a man and woman were being disruptive on board the service, playing tag up and down the carriage.

Other passengers asked the couple to settle down, however they became abusive. They attempted to provoke a fight before racially abusing an Asian couple, asking them to bring them “fried rice” in an offensive accent.

They were eventually removed from the train at Lancaster

Officers believe the man and woman shown in this CCTV image may have information which could help them investigate. Do you know who they are?
