

Irish football fan subjected to xenophobic abuse at Tynecastle

Police are appealing for witnesses after an Irish football fan was subjected to xenophobic comments during the Hearts vs St Johnstone match on January 26 at Tynecastle Stadium.

The 52-year-old was watching the game from the Roseburn Stand with his young family when a man behind started using offensive language, aimed towards the St Johnstone supporters.

The victim asked if the man to be mindful of his language as there were young children nearby and a xenophobic comment was directed toward him.

A spokesman for Police Scotland said: "Stewards at the match were made aware and reported the matter to police who have been conducting inquiries to identify the suspect. "Others who were within the Roseburn Stand and witnessed this incident are asked to come forward and assist officers with their investigation.
