

What's on – Wildlife Printmaking Exhibition

The Scottish Ornithologists' Club SOC welcomes a group of printmakers: Carry Akroyd, Babs Pease, Kelly Stewart and Susie Wright for a group exhibition inspired by wildlife.

For some, Carry Akroyd in particular, wildlife is a central concern and the focus of their art practice. For others it is a rich source of inspiration to which they return frequently alongside other interests. All share the language of printmaking (screen-prints and linocuts in particular) as their main medium.

Each has a very personal and distinctive approach: from bold shapes to subtle lines, paired down compositions to overlapping transparencies. The result is a contrasting and joyful exhibition and a perfect spring display!

Open daily, 10am to 4pm, at The Scottish Ornithologists' Club, Aberlady, East Lothian, EH32 0PY

2 March – 11 April 2019 at the Scottish Ornithologists' Club, Aberlady

Getting there: The SOC is situated at Waterston House, in Aberlady, East Lothian. By car, just off the A198, on the left after the Aberlady sign, free parking. By bus: East Coast Buses 124, X24 and X5 stop almost at the door.

Open times: daily 10am to 4pm, free entry.

About the SOC: The Scottish Ornithologists' Club is Scotland's national bird club with over 3000 members and a network of 15 branches across Scotland which host a programme of talks, discussions and outings from the Borders to Orkney and beyond.

About Waterston House: Waterston House is fully accessible and houses a resource centre for bird-watching including a shop, the largest ornithological reference library in Scotland and an art gallery dedicated to wildlife art. The centre is open to all (members and non-members) free of charge.
