Travel feature – French Leave

You can fly from Edinburgh to a dozen airports all over France, so the whole country is your oyster.

Here I suggest a menu of things to see and do in France this summer.

Grand Reims journey PHOTO Cyrille Beudot LOVELY BUBBLY

Scotland won't be in contention as Reims hosts the FIFA Women's Football World Cup, but there's still plenty to celebrate in Reims. Put some fizz into your life with a trip to France's Champagne capital.

Another Notre-Dame

Start your day in Reims by visiting the Catedral Notre-Dame de Reims. A near contemporary of its Paris namesake, it was founded in 1211. There's a fine view of Reims from its towers and the interior glows with medieval and modern stained glass.

From the 11th century onward, all France's kings were crowned in Reims and until 23 September 2019 a breathtaking new sound and light show at the cathedral, Regalia, recreates the power and glory of a medieval coronation.

There's art for all tastes in Reims. The 17th-century Palais du Tau (www.monuments-nationaux.fr), opposite the Catedral, is filled with medieval sculpture, tapestries and religious art. If your taste runs to classical art, you'll find Corot landscapes and David's Death of Marat in the Musée des Beaux-Arts.There's work of a very different kind at the Champagne-Ardenne Regional Foundation for Contemporary Art (FRAC), with a collection of modern art from the 1960s to the 21st century (www.frac-champagneardenne.org).

And the bubbly?

The high point of any visit to Reims is a visit to one of the city's venerable Champagne houses. A two-hour tour of the cellars at Maison Ruinart (www.ruinart.com) costs €70 per person ends with a tasting session.

EAT AND DRINK

Reims is a gourmand's delight, with six Michelin-starred restaurants sharing nine stars between. Queening it over them Arnaud Lallement's triple-starred L'Assiette all is Champenoise (www.assiettechampenoise.com). The cheapest menu here costs €105, but you could easily spend €400 a head. On a more modest budget, you'll find regional dishes at Brasserie du Boulingrin (29-31 Rue de Mars www.boulingrin.fr), next to the vast Halles du Boulingrin covered market. The lunch menu starts at around €10.00 . L'Edito (74-80 Place Drouet d'Erlon www.brasserie-ledito-reims.fr) is a lively brasserie where the lunch bill will start at around €30 a head. End the day at As Before, Reims's swish jazz and piano bar, which stays open into the small hours (35 rue Buirette, www.salon- degermann.com).

Chavin Observatory PHOTO Matthieu Pinaud DON'T LOOK DOWN

The big deal at the 2877-metre Pic Du Midi is the Chavin observatory with its 400mm telescope and a breathtaking view of a starry sky free of light pollution and unobscured by clouds. In the daytime, there are panoramic views of the Pyrénées from a new 12-metre walkway glass-floored pontoon. Don't look down unless you have a good head for heights.

MAGIC MONUMENTS

France's national heritage organisation, the Centre des Monuments Nationaux, hosts a choice of fascinating events and exhibitions at iconic buildings all over France over the next six months.

Summer spectacular

The Chateau d'Azay-le-Rideau, loveliest of the Loire chateaus, celebrates 500 years of the French Renaissance this summer with an evening sound and light show that turns the Italianate facade and gardens into a stunning spectacle that makes you wonder why Catherine de Medici spent so long in Leith.

(29 June-1 Sept)

Fly to Nantes from Edinburgh with Ryanair. Azay-le-Rideau is around 200km from Nantes and the drive (along the picturesque Loire) takes about 2hrs 30 mins.

Light and colour

British artist Liz West unveils installations inspired by the colours and light of ancient Beaulieu-en-Rouergue Abbey, where an outstanding collection of contemporary art graces the grounds and interior, rescued in the 1950s by collectors Genevieve Bonnefoi and Pierre Brache. (Until 30 September)

Fly from Edinburgh to Toulouse with Ryanair, then drive (under two hours).

Let them eat cake!

Marie-Antoinette famously condemned herself when she suggest that the Paris mob might get by on brioches when the bread ran out. Well, you know how the French are about their bread. This autumn, visit the Conciergerie in Paris, where she spent her final days before the guillotine fell, to discover the woman behind the playgirl legend (16 Oct-27 Jan 2020).
