

Open Day at the City of Edinburgh Music School

If you have a gifted musician in your house then you might like to take them to the City of Edinburgh Music School Open Day on 2 November 2019.

The school has its home at Broughton High School on East Fettes Avenue and is a non fee paying specialist school.

Director Tudor Morris explains the ethos of the school : “The intensive training – involving regular practice, various ensembles and individual expert tuition from the most talented and dedicated teachers in the land, paves the way for our students to secure positions in some of the most prestigious colleges, universities, ensembles, orchestras and media organisations in the world.”
