Coronavirus — Prime Minister is admitted to hospital

The Prime Minister Boris Johnson has reportedly been taken to hospital this evening for investigations related to coronavirus.

It was reported ten days ago that Mr Johnson along with a couple of other Cabinet ministers had tested positive for the virus.

He was last seen alone on the doorstep at Number 10 on Thursday evening clapping for the NHS and other carers.

And it is clear that he still had a temperature on Friday when he delivered this update:

> Another quick update from me on our campaign against #coronavirus.
>
> You are saving lives by staying at home, so I urge you to stick with it this weekend, even if we do have some fine weather.#StayHomeSaveLives pic.twitter.com/4GHmJhxXQ0
>
> — Boris Johnson #StayHomeSaveLives (@BorisJohnson) April 3, 2020