At the Open Eye Gallery — Brent Millar and Marianne Wood

At Open Eye Gallery there are two exhibitions running side by side this month.

Brent Millar After the Rain runs until 24 October and shows off work by the Edinburgh-based artist whose inspirations are nature, poetry and music. Millar studied at Edinburgh College of Art where he was taught by Sir Robin Philipson and Dame Elizabeth Blackadder.

Open Eye Gallery say: "Brent creates dreamlike compositions where observation and imagination blur harmoniously. Birds are a unifying theme in his practice, emerging as the symbolic link between music and nature. Starlings, goldfinches, chaffinches and swans repeatedly sweep into his paintings, defined in areas of saturated colour and delineated by bold strokes.

"With a complex palette, the artist layers and re-works his compositions, contrasting areas of chaos with patches of calm. His practice extends into both print and drawing but relies on paint as his medium of choice. The influence of Picasso, Matisse and Francis Bacon permeates his work and an impressionist brushstroke is employed in his vivid flower studies. Not beholden to trend or fashion in contemporary art, Brent has forged his own path to become a respected, soughtafter figure in the Edinburgh art scene."
