

‘Wondrous Woods’ at Hopetoun House to be sponsored by Walter Scott Giving Group

Wondrous Woods, Scotland’s newest lighting trail has secured a corporate sponsor for their relaxed performance evening in October. The lighting trail, being organised by Edinburgh event company 21CC Group opens its gates at Hopetoun House on 21st October promising 2km of beautifully lit woodland trails and a magical safe night out for families.

Organiser, Geoff Crow of 21CC Group says “We understand that the multi-sensory nature of the environment may cause sensory overload in those with Autism or other sensory processing disorders, so on Tuesday 27th October we are reducing capacity, decreasing the sound levels, and increasing the lighting levels to ensure the best possible experience for our guests.

“All of this is only possible with the support we have secured from Walter Scott; we are delighted that they are on board with us, allowing us to bring this event to those who may have ordinarily decided not to attend”.

A spokesperson from Walter Scott said “The Walter Scott Giving Group is proud and delighted to support this ground-breaking event. This relaxed performance is a tremendous opportunity to raise accessibility and inclusivity for all children and young people and enabling them to share and enjoy this wonderful Wondrous Woods experience.”

Geoff Crow goes on to say “In a year where there have been so few events, it is hugely encouraging to have secured a corporate sponsor that allows us to deliver this relaxed evening at a significantly reduced ticket price. With this addition to our programme, we are now opening the gates for a fantastic 18 nights in total, all of which has a significant positive impact on the Scottish events industry.”
