

Valentine's gifts to melt hearts

The most romantic day of the year often involves going out for a special day, usually with a lunch or dinner in the mix somewhere.

Instead, during the lockdown, a number of city centre restaurants have devised Valentine's Day menus which they will deliver to you. And there are some gift selections below from a couple of our independent gift shops.

But one of the most innovative might be from The Bike Station who are running a Valentine's campaign where someone who buys a bike from them on Saturday 13th February will win their bike for free. Read more here.

One of Edinburgh's newest bistros has come to the rescue of romantics by launching "Love In A Box", ready for Valentine's Day.

Offering a decadent 4-course menu with the finest Scottish ingredients, The Garden Bistro at Saughton Park have curated a menu which can be prepared and presented to your loved one within 90 minutes – giving you enough time to get dressed up and create a romantic mood.

Beginning with the canapés, you can set the scene with a Stilton, date and walnut chutney puff pastry pillow.

The starter is a decadent twice-baked cheese soufflé, served with an apple and celeriac salad and the main event is a Scottish Beef Wellington, served with potato dauphinoise, Provençale vegetable slice and a port wine jus.

A devilish dessert concludes the meal with a Callebaut chocolate fondant served with macerated strawberries.

The “Love in a Box” package is available to purchase now for £75 (for two people). Customers can upgrade their Box and add a signature bottle of Italian Prosecco for £95 (for two people).

GIFTS

At Paper Tiger they have gone big on everything online, but they are especially feeling the love this Valentine's Day. For last minute requests, they can also deliver your orders by bike.

Paper Tiger managing director, Michael Apter, made suggestions for the perfect gift depending on your connections to different areas of Edinburgh. Each range includes chocolate, candles, cards, tea towels and prints.

Heart Of Midlothian Collection

The Heart Of Midlothian means different things to many different people. It's the stone heart located beside Saint Giles' Cathedral on the Royal Mile, or perhaps it's the novel of the same name by Scots Romanticist author Sir Walter Scott, immortalised in stone at the Scott Monument on Princes Street. The Heart Of Midlothian is a football Club. And the Heart Of Midlothian is a state of mind.

Leith Collection

Leith is not in Edinburgh. Leith is Leith. Almost 1000 years of history separate the port that serves the city, from the city that it serves – a boundary formerly marked by the pub

The Boundary Bar, and fiercely defended by Leith natives!

Paper Tiger stocks a wide range of Valentine Cards so that you do not have to miss out on expressing your true feelings for someone in your love bubble this year.
