Getting started

When you browse the casino sites online, you will know in short order if they have crisp, clear graphics. They should not show any lag when you are looking around. You should feel a genuine casino experience when you enter the site. Look around the site as much as you are allowed to before registering for an account. If you are unable to maneuver the site, set up your free account, but do not fund the account until you are sure you want to play there.

Check the methods of contacting customer service. Most online casinos have 24/7 CSR agents available via chat and email. Read the FAQ section to be sure you understand how the site works. Be sure to look up how and when your winnings are paid when you have won a game. Now that you have a good feel of the site, you can continue.

Setting up your account is a seamless experience. You will fill in basic information such as your name, address, email, and phone number. In some cases, you will need to provide your identification card when you register. The systems are usually user-friendly.

Now, you will need to fund your account. A quality casino site will have a variety of funding methods. It should take all major credit cards and have a place to have the money sent directly from your bank. If you choose this option, you will be unable to play until the funds have arrived, which can take up to 72-hours.

It is important to be very careful when setting up your accounts. This is the same account they will use to pay you your winnings. Make sure your account numbers and other information are accurate.

Now you simply select your game(s) and play.
